

The Do Not Call law has been very helpful to myself as well as my mother. Even though I have CID, there are people I have personal business with that come up "unknown name & # on my ID. I would answer the phone many, many times only to be bothered by very persistent salespeople that want to sell me a mortgage, vinyl siding, replacement windows, etc. I am disabled and my mother is disabled. It is not always convenient to get to the phone. Since the Do Not Call law, it has stopped many unwanted phone calls at inconvenient times. It should also be illegal to sell names & numbers to marketing companies. Political recordings are a nuisance also. Why would the FCC want to get rid of D/N/C? It is optional for people to sign-up, not mandatory.
